

COLDWATER CANYON PARK & TREEPEOPLE HISTORY

In 1973, TreePeople Founder and President, Andy Lipkis, stumbled upon an old fire station that occupied Coldwater Canyon Park since the 1920s.

Surrounded by sage-covered hills and oaks, the landscape was the ideal location for TreePeople to cultivate environmental healing and education. In 1977, the site became TreePeople's headquarters when the fire department moved to a new facility.

Today, the 45-acre Coldwater Canyon Park is an oasis for the general public. It has grown with the addition of the S. Mark Taper Foundation Amphitheatre, S. Mark Taper Foundation Environmental Learning Center, W.M. Keck Foundation Nursery, Conference Center, and the offices of TreePeople in Yurt Village.

Litter Trash cans and recycling bins are located conveniently throughout the park. Please use them to discard your waste materials, and take whatever you bring into the park with you when you leave.

Trail Safety The park is home to many plants and animals, so make sure you stay on the designated paths to avoid unpleasant encounters with rattlesnakes, ticks and poison oak.
